Time to recalibrate. Development co-operation tackling poverty and inequalities through the green transition

Event highlights:

- High-level officials, including Ministers from Brazil, Norway, Sierra Leone, and State Secretary from Germany
- Leaders from international organisations and civil society
- Launch of the OECD Development Co-operation Report 2024: Tackling poverty and inequalities through the green transition

About the event:

As the world grapples with multiple challenges, the international community must not lose sight of a more silent, yet devastating crisis: the alarming rise of poverty and inequalities in low- and middle-income countries. The OECD Development Co-operation Report 2024 addresses the intersecting challenges at stake: the shifting patterns of poverty and inequalities, how climate change is exacerbating both, and the potential of harnessing green transitions to serve the core mission of development co-operation to reduce poverty and inequalities.

Key discussion points:

- Policy solutions and best practices for ending poverty, reducing inequalities, and building climate resilience that development co-operation can support.
- Opportunities to reduce poverty and inequalities while fostering green transitions.
- Concrete ways to fulfil commitments and step up collective action for people and the planet.

Why attend?

2024 and 2025 are pivotal years for accelerating progress towards Agenda 2030 and mobilising new finance for development and climate action. This event will feature political leaders from UN Member States and senior leaders from international organisations and civil society, discussing strategies to correct course and mobilise collective action ahead of crucial global summits.

Don't miss this opportunity to engage in a vital conversation on how to step up action to achieve SDG 1, SDG 10 and SDG 17.
